

bridge¹ (brij) n. [ME. brisse < OE. brycge < IE. base bhr̥n*, log, beam, hence wooden causeway] 1. a structure built over a river, railroad, highway, etc. to provide a way across for vehicles or pedestrians 2. a thing that provides connection, contact, or transition /a common language is a bridge between cultures/ 3. a) the upper bony part of the nose b) the curved bow of a pair of glasses fitting over the nose 4. the thin arched piece over which the strings of a violin, cello, etc. are stretched 5. an overhead framework across sets of railroad tracks, for carrying signals; gantry 6. a platform above the main deck of a ship, from which it is controlled, as by the commanding officer 7. a dividing partition for keeping fuel in place in a furnace or boiler 8. Billiards a) the position in which the hand is placed to form a support for the cue in making a shot b) a notched piece of wood sometimes used for this purpose 9. Dentistry a fixed or removable mounting for a false tooth or teeth, attached to a real tooth or teeth 10. Elec. a device used primarily in measuring resistances, frequencies, etc., by comparing the effect of the unknown element with that of known or standard elements in the circuit 11. Music a connecting passage between two sections of a composition —v. bridged, bridging 1. to build a bridge on or over 2. to provide a bridge, connection, transition, etc. across or between —burn one's bridges (behind one) to commit oneself to a course from which there is no retreat —bridge/a. ble adj.

bridge² (brij) n. [earlier (1886) birich, "Russian whist," altered after prec.; game and name ? of Russ. origin] any of various card games for two pairs of players, that developed from whist: see AUCTION BRIDGE, CONTRACT BRIDGE bridge-board (-bôrd') n. any of the notched boards holding the treads and risers of a staircase; string 0.176 bridge-head (-hed') n. 1. a fortified place or position established by an attacking force on the enemy's side of a bridge, river, defile, etc. 2. same as BEACHHEAD (sense 2)

Bridge-port (brij'pôrt) [after the bridge across the Poquonock River] seaport in SW Conn., on Long Island Sound: pop. 143,000

Bridges (brij'az) 1. Harry, (born Alfred Bryant Remon Bridges) 1900-; U.S. labor leader, born in Australia 2. Robert (Seymour), 1844-1930; Eng. poet; poet laureate (1913-30) 176

